ST. LOUIS — Called “one of the most vital and original ensembles on the American Music scene” by The New York Times, Alarm Will Sound performs cutting edge chamber music contemporary composers such as by John Adams, Aphex Twin and John Medeski. They return for their seventh “St. Louis Season” with energetic virtuosity and a sense of adventure!

Alarm Will Sound, returns to The Sheldon on Friday, September 21, 2018 at 8 p.m. with Mind Out of Matter, a 74-minute, eight movement suite, that brings together composer Scott Johnson’s mix of pop sensibilities and classical rigor with his groundbreaking work in transcribing speech into music. Musical styles as disparate as retro-funk and Baroque recitative blend to illuminate Dennett’s central claim: just as living organisms evolve in the physical environment, ideas and traditions compete within ecosystems made up of human minds and cultures. Those evolutionary forces shape the religious ideas that populate our minds, multiply within our cultures, and spread like viruses — sometimes to our benefit, sometimes not.
